

Introduction

GitHub is used to store and manage the FitBuddy project source code using version control.

The final project is organized into a structured repository containing the application source code, frontend files and documentation.